InnoPharma Has Established Track Record in the Development of Hard-to-Make, Differentiated, Sterile Injectable Products

Portfolio of 10 Approved Products and Pipeline of More Than 30 Products in Development; 19 Pending Approval with the United States Food and Drug Administration

Wednesday, July 16, 2014 - 9:25am EDT

Pfizer Inc. (NYSE:PFE) and InnoPharma, Inc., a privately held pharmaceutical development company, today announced that they have entered into an agreement under which Pfizer will acquire InnoPharma.

Under the terms of the agreement, Pfizer will acquire InnoPharma for an upfront cash payment of $225 million, with up to $135 million of contingent milestone payments.

InnoPharma's current portfolio includes 10 generic products approved by the United States (U.S.) Food and Drug Administration (FDA). The company also has a pipeline of 19 products filed with FDA and more than 30 injectable and ophthalmic products under development. The company seeks to develop novel formulations of existing drugs, including hard-to-make products, such as those that require complex manufacturing capabilities or have bio-equivalency challenges, in areas such as cancer and central nervous disorders.

"Today's announcement is an important milestone as we continue to look for innovative growth opportunities for our sterile injectables portfolio, which will increase to seventy three products with this acquisition," said John Young, group president, Pfizer Global Established Pharma (GEP). "InnoPharma's technical capabilities in bringing complex generics to market, coupled with its strong talent and product pipeline, build on our efforts to develop and commercialize critically important medicines for the patients who need them.”

Pfizer Injectables is part of the Global Established Pharma business and includes the manufacturing, production and sale of human pharmaceutical and surgical products. The current active sterile injectable portfolio consists of 44 products with over 190 presentations in the U.S. The new Pfizer portfolio of seventy three products will include currently marketed, as well as products filed with the FDA.

Established in 2005, InnoPharma has a comprehensive research and development facility in Piscataway, NJ. The company has developed capabilities in complex injectable delivery forms, including pens and depot injectables, and is working to leverage this expertise to expand into new dosage forms, including oral suspensions and nasals.

“InnoPharma has emerged as a strong development company over the years, with a portfolio of complex and differentiated products that provide value and options to patients and payors, and has an excellent team that has executed on this business model so successfully,” said Navneet Puri, PhD, President and CEO of InnoPharma. “We are very pleased to continue to provide this value as part of Pfizer, which has demonstrated its leadership within the pharmaceutical industry and a focus on improving patient health.”

The closing of the transaction is subject to U.S. regulatory approval and is expected to occur during the third quarter.

Pfizer’s legal advisor for the transaction was Kaye Scholer LLP. J.P. Morgan served as InnoPharma’s financial advisor, while Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP served as its legal advisor.
